The latest defendant in a series of cases involving the sale of counterfeit goods at or near the Plaza shopping center pleaded guilty in Lynchburg Circuit Court Tuesday morning.

Christopher Lamont Miller was fined $3,000 and sentenced to four months in jail with another 2½ years suspended on charges of selling counterfeit DVDs, CDs, shoes and purses.

Miller was charged with selling the items out of the business he owned, DJ's Urban Music Center, Deputy Commonwealth's Attorney Chuck Felmlee said in a plea agreement.

During the fall of 2008, law enforcement began receiving complaints that stores in the Plaza were selling counterfeit movies, CDs, clothing and accessories.

For several months that winter, ABC agents posed as customers and purchased music made in violation of copyright laws as well as fake Nike Air Jordan shoes and Baby Phat Jeans.
